EXCHANGE OF PROFESSORS BETWEEN HARVARD UNIVERSITY AND THE GERMAN UNIVERSITIES

THE systematic exchange of professors between American and German Universities was established in December, 1904, by an agreement between the President and Fellows of Harvard College and the Prussian Ministry of Education. In January, 1905, this agreement received the hearty approval of the German Emperor, and the first exchange of professors took place in the academic year 1905-06.

The immediate object of the exchange of professors is to gain, for each University concerned, fresh contributions of learning, new and invigorating personal contacts, and new points of view. Through the closer intimacy and sympathy thus engendered between scholars in both nations, a similar result may undoubtedly be hoped for in the relation of the two peoples; but this broader purpose depends strictly on the attainment of the immediate benefits above mentioned. The exchange of professors is, in short, a strictly intellectual and educational undertaking in spirit, method, and immediate object.

The President and Fellows have appointed as Visiting Professor of German Art for the year 1907-08, the third year of the exchange, Paul Clemen, Ph.D., Professor of the History of Art at the University of Bonn, and Provincial Conservator of the Rhine Province.
